LIEUT. L. M. EEK BACK FROM FLYING

MANY CHANGES SINCE WAR, HE SAYS

NEW ATTACK METHODS

And the Machines Are Kept up in the Best of Shape—More Power From Motors

Lieut. L. M. Eek of the Sisson Loan and Title Company returned this morning from two weeks training in flying at Chanute Field at Rantoul, Ill. His training was with the 370th Flying Squadron of the U. S. Air Service.

Lieutenant Eek, who flew for two years during the World War, said this afternoon that many changes in methods and equipment have taken place in the three years since the war. He says that the machines are more powerful and more reliable now than they were during the war. Everything is kept in the best of shape and it is remarkable how quickly the mechanics can locate a trouble if one should occur.

Various new manuevers were gone through at the camp. One of these was a method of attack. A batallion is sighted coming along a railroad track. The airplane is some miles distant but close enough that it would be heard, should it fly high. But by keeping within a hundred feet of the ground it is able to fly along without being heard a considerable distance. It goes about until it can get behind some obstacle, such as a grove and behind this it comes close to the battalion. Suddenly it swoops upon the men. Within a half minute of the time it comes in sight it is upon them driving in a circle pouring ninety machine gun bullets a minute into the group.

Lieutenant Eek says that he was much enthused over flying during the war, but that he is more so now than before. He thinks that the air service is perhaps the nation's most important line of defense.

Lieutenant Eek says that the new method of attack requires great skill in flying, since, should one have trouble at a distance of 100 feet from the ground he would be sure to fall before it could be adjusted.

MAN IN DEMENTED CONDITION ESCAPES FROM RELATIVES

Employe on Farm Near Sheridan Gets Away From His Father-in-Law at Pickering.

Thompson answers to the following description: About forty years old, 5 feet and 8 inches tall, dark hair and eyes, dressed in blue shirt and blue overalls with bib brown coat and black hat. Anyone seeing a man whom they believe to be Thompson is asked to notify Mr. Carter at Pickering.

Thompson was tracked for a distance from the Carter home in the direction of Sheridan and it is believed that he continued in that direction. It is said that he was not violent.

SCHOOL SUPPLIES MUCH CHANGED

NOT LIKE THEY WERE A FEW YEARS BACK

MANY THINGS MISSING

Among These the "Hickory Rod"—Few Slates and More Equipment to Make Work Concrete

With just a few days left before the opening of the schools the demand for school supplies is becoming considerable at the supply stores through out the county and this demand has changed greatly in the last few years. Many of the things that even the folks who are still called young men and women when they were in school are gone now, or practically so.

The days of the slate and its noisy pencil and its sponge eraser, or shirt sleeves as the case often was, has practically disappeared.

The water bucket with its community dipper in one corner of the room is gone. It has been replaced by a fountain with a faucet, and individual cups or by a bubbling fountain.

The wooden-backed eraser for the blackboards, which made a lot of noise when it was dropped to the floor, is seldom called for. It is replaced by the sanitary, felt, noiseless eraser, which takes up most of the dust.

The old-fashioned white crayon has been replaced by a hard variety that makes but little dust.

The broom which the teacher or one of the pupils wert over the floor each evening after school or in the morning before the children came has been replaced by the floor brush which is used with a sweeping compound and many of the floors of the rural schools are now oiled. The fog of dust that used to pour out of the windows of the rural school when the sweeping was being done is about gone.

Paper towels are provided for the children so that they may wash if they become dirty in their playing.

The old stove in the center of the building which roasted those close to it and allowed those in the more remote parts of the building to nearly freeze on cold days is about gone too. In most cases if a stove is used at all it has a jacket so that it functions much the same that a furnace would.

And there is another thing missing that used to be much in evidence and that is the "hickory rod." Teachers have methods of getting results from their pupils now other than the "fear of the rod."

D. E. Hotchkin, who has been in the school supply business in Maryville for a number of years, says that he has demands for many things now that never were thought of during his earlier career in the business. And the things are those that he believes are of a great help to the teachers and their pupils in their work. There are books of suggestions for the teachers, there are things to keep the children busy such as hand work of various kinds, there are books of stories and exercises for the opening periods, there are pictures for the pupils to study and write compositions about there is toy money for their games and work in arithmetic, there are toy fence making sticks of the six primary colors, there is clay for making models and there are a dozen and one other things that make the work more interesting and concrete.

One of the big features that has

DO NOT FAVOR THE CUMMINS BILL

ILLINOIS OPERATORS WANT FACT FINDING AGENCY SELECTED.

LETTER BY DR. HONNOLD

Guarantee of Adequate Transportation and the Maintenance of Law and Order.

Dr. F. C. Honnold of Chicago, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Coal Operators' Association, has written a letter to Illinois Senators and Representatives, and to some of the Congressmen from other states as well with respect to pending legislation before the Congress. Dr. Honnold is well known here, having frequently visited in Maryville when his mother, Mrs. Mary J. Honnold, was alive.

The text of the letter follows:

"Dear Sir: With respect to pending legislation before the Congress, you will doubtless desire to know the sentiment of Illinois operators.

1. They continue to feel and are positive that there can be no correction of the actual or alleged evils of the industry that does not contemplate equal and adequate control of the organized labor in the industry. Legal responsibility for their acts and a clearly defined form of arbitration for every disputed point on which employer and employee may not agree, either in bargaining for a new wage scale and working agreement or in settling disputes afterwards arising thereunder, is imperative, otherwise, as the past few months have clearly indicated, the most threatening kind of monopoly will become permanently established and to an extent that will be beyond the control of the government itself—there having been very manifest evidence of the possibility of such ultimate outcome during the past ten weeks.

2. Nor is it believed, based upon the experience of the Fuel Administration in 1917 and 1918, as well as the arbitrary action of the Railroad Administration in 1919, that any arbitrary action of the government through bureaucratic organization can handle any situation of emergency for a major industry, as well as it can be handled under private ownership. For this reason, the Cummins bill is believed to be decidedly inimical to the entire public and to every branch of industry.

3. Operators quite universally, have publicly and repeatedly stated their belief that through some fact finding agency appointed by the resident, composed of first class, high grade, public spirited citizens, on whom both the operators and miners might depend and in whom the public would have entire confidence, gave promise of the most satisfactory results, through the establishment of the exact facts regarding the production and distribution of coal. The public has never known the facts and never can through any effort of the parties at interest, i. e., the miners and operators; or through any commission or committee, the motives of which may be subject to suspicion because of fear that political expediency might enter into the final determinations.

4. Nor do the operators believe any more at this time than they have throughout the past five years, that either the disease with respect to sporadic, unfortunate fuel conditions, or the remedy for correction should be assailed through the coal industry, but should rather be approached through,

(a) The guarantee of adequate transportation, and

(b) The maintenance of law and order.

Prior to the abandonment of these two basic conditions ,ample and adequate volumes of coal were always available to the American public for any use and at the lowest prices known any where in the world, nor throughout all this period were wage earners in the coal mining industry paid as little as was paid in other lines.

An average of $1.07½ an hour paid today to Illinois miners for a class of work, as to severity and skill required, for which the steel companies are paying 36c an hour, is a reflection of approximately the same conditions that have for the past score of years prevailed in the coal industry with respect to wages.

With the removal of the unwarrantedly indulgent wage rate made available to coal miners during the last five years, through the compelling power of their union, the question of too many mines and too many miners will very promptly correct itself in the same fashion that it has always done so heretofore.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) F. C. HONNOLD,
Secretary-Treasurer."

HELMS FOUND GUILTY BY JURY AND FINED $20

Was Arrested August 25 and Plead Not Guilty—Conflict in Testimonies

Guy Helm was found guilty of being drunk. He was fined $20 and costs by a jury of 6 men in police court this morning. Helm was arrested August 25 by Ed Wallace, night watchman, at the same time that Hatch Ellsworth was arrested. Ellsworth pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness and was fined $10 and costs, Helm pleaded not guilty and his trial was set for this morning.

The evidence tended to show that Helm was seen on the corner of Third and Market streets with Hatch Ellsworth and Mark Cummins by Ed Wallace and John Porter, who were across the street in a car. Cummings anod Helm left Ellsworth on the corner and started east. About three blocks farther on they were overtaken by Wallace and Porter who were in the car with Ellsworth in the back seat.

The officers testified that Wallace told Helm to get into the car and he would take him home and he could report to the mayor in the morning. Helm said he would not report to the mayor because had no cause to report. Wallace then locked him up in the calaboose.

Helm testified that he was not drunk, he had not been drinking. Roy Yeaman, Mark Cummings, James Conklin, Sr., and James Conklin, Jr., testified that they say Helm on that day and that he did not appear to be drunk. James Conklin, Jr., testified that Helm did not show any signs of intoxication about 6 o'clock that afternoon, but that he had seen him drunk and that he gave Helm the first drink that he ever had in Maryville. He said Helm was as sober as he ever saw him in his life.

Helm was convicted on the testimony of Ed Wallace, E. E. Tilton, John Porter and Frank McKee, all officers of the law.

The jury was composed of C. A. McCoppin, Alex Holt, Edward Wolfert, F. D. Miller, I. R. Neal and A. L. Nash.

Helm appealed the case to the September term of circuit court and was released on $75 bond which was signed by John Shonley. W. G. Sawyers was attorney for Helm and T. C. Cummins was attorney for the city.

HARDING WANTS POWER TO SEIZE ROADS AND MINES

But It Is Stated That They Would Be Taken over Only in Case Of Suffering

Washington, Aug. 29—It was announced today from the White House that the president desires to have the authority given him to seize the railroads and the coal mines before the forthcoming recess of congress.

It is stated that the actual seizure of them is far from his mind and that steps will only be taken when necessitated to prevent the public from freezing this winter. Also during the recess there would be no legal or constitutional question as to the right, should it become necessary to seize either the mines or the railroads.

CALIFORNIA VOTERS TO DECIDE TODAY

IF JOHNSON RUNS AGAIN OR MOORE NAMED AS SUCCESSOR.

BOTH CAMPS CONFIDENT

Political Searchlight Centered on West as Test of Senior Senator's Status Comes to Issue.

By ELLIS H. MARTIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

San Francisco, Aug 29—The political orbs of the nation, which of late have been quite busy turning from one State primary to another, were focused interestedly on California today as voters of the Golden State wended their way to the polls to register their verdict on Senator Hiram Johnson.

The senior Senator is opposed for renomination by Charles C. Moore, wealthy business man, leading olive grower of the State and best known as president of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

Johnson's supporters predicted an overwhelming victory for the Senator.

Moore Camp Optimistic

Moore's backers professed confidence, however, and declared that when the ballots were counted there would be a surprising upset of the dope.

Senator Johnson himself has never felt the campaign to be in doubt. The day he arrived a little over a month ago to begin his campaign he declared:

"It is the same old fight against the same old gang, and it will be the same result."

Forthwith he plunged into a speaking campaign which has taken him from one end of the state to the other, bringing to bear all his old-time fire and enthusiasm. Immense crowds have greeted him wherever he went, this being particularly true in Southern California, claimed by Moore's backers to favor the latter's candidacy.

Throughout the campaign Senator Johnson has never mentioned the name of his opponent, refering to him always as the "vicarious candidate." However, he has attacked Moore's backers without mercy.

Stands on Record

"I stand on my record," Senator Johnson told his audiences. "I have no apologies to make concerning my stand on the League of Nations issue and the Four Power Pact."

Much of the backing of Moore admittedly is the element that favored Herbert Hoover two years ago against Johnson and supported the League of Nations.

"The interests fighting me really are fighting the people of California and the progressive and humanitarian laws this State won after a long, hard battle," Senator Johnson declared during the course of his campaign.

Senator Johnson's successful fight for tariff protection for California products has aligned much support behind him that in years gone by favored other candidates.

There is little interest in the Democratic primaries, there being but one contest.

Friend K. Richardson is contesting the renomination of Governor W. D. Stephens in the Republican primaries and several other hot contests are on, notably for the State Treasurership.

STRIKERS HOLD FOR THEIR SENIORITY

WOULD "SEE EXECUTIVES IN HELL" BEFORE SURRENDER.

SECRET BIG 4 MEETING?

Many Gathering at Cleveland to Determine If Will Terminate Their Agreements.

Chicago, Aug. 29—The striking shopmen will see the railway executives in hell before they surrender their seniority rights, B. M. Jewell, strike leader, declared in a message to members of his organization. He said today the strikers have responded to offers of those attempting to compose the differences and railroads now say in substance "crawl back like whipped dogs, we'll take back a few of you." Our reply is "we'll see you in hell first."

Washington, Aug. 29—Despite deterioration in the rolling stock resulting from the shopmen's strike, the railroads are expected to be able to move all coal for the country needs this winter, Secretary of Commerce Hoover declared today. It is necessary to move seventeen million tons weekly during the next six weeks, he said.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 29—Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the brotherhood locomotive engineers, declared today the meeting of the brotherhoods was not to consider advisiability of serving thirty days notice on the railroads of their intention to terminate their agreement.

Washington, Aug. 29—It is reported in reliable circles that the chiefs of the "Big Four" brotherhoods will meet secretly in Cleveland within forty-eight hours to determine the advisability of serving a 30-day notice on the railroads of their intention to terminate their present working agreement. The agreement expires September 30 and thirty days notice are required. If the agreement is to terminate September 30 it will be necessary that the notice be given by Thursday.

The brotherhoods want assurance that no wage reductions and no modification of the seniority rights are to be made and assurance of safe equipment. Many of the rail executives are known to be willing to meet the conditions.

Dansville, Ill., Aug. 29.—Four bombs hurled today at the shops of the Chicago & Eastern Railway here threw three hundred and seventy-five workers into a panic. The authorities believe that it was an attempt to kill or injure the workers and the guards housed in the building. Every window was shattered by the explosion.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—The United States Railway Labor Board today refused to accept the living wage principle as a basis of maintenance-of-way employes. In the hearing Senator Cummins asked for immediate action towards the passage of an amendment to the transportation act to compel the board to accept the principles as a wage find basis.

DEMOCRATS WILL WAGE A SPEAKING CAMPAIGN

Committee Meeting With Candidates This Afternoon Discussed the Coming Campaign

A meeting of the Democratic county committee was held at the office of Ellis G. Cook, secretary of the committee, this afternoon to discuss plans for the campaign. Several candidates on the county ticket were in attendance at the meeting.

Mrs. James B. Robinson resigned as committeewoman from Polk township. Her resignation was accepted. Her place will be filled at a later date.

The Democrats intend to wage a campaign for the success of the entire ticket. Meetings with speakers from the state and out of state will be held. Plans will be made for a meeting in every township.

EXPORTS AND PROSPERITY

It has been widely argued that the United States can not be prosperous until conditions in Europe are straightened out, so that they can buy American goods freely.

The figures just issued of American exports for the fiscal year ending June 30th last do not uphold this discouraging theory. These exports for the past year, though less than half the stupendous total for the flush times of 1920, yet reached the great sum of $3,771,181,000. The averages for the pre-war years from 1911 to 1914, was only about $2,270,000,000. Of course prices are higher now, so totals mount up more. But the increase is nearly double the figures of the pre-war years, while prices con not average much over 50 per cent above pre-war figures now. Our foreign trade is very good, in spite of Europe's poverty.

If at any time business conditions are unsatisfactory, the trouble is not always to be found across the world and on conditions beyond our power to remedy. It is often right at home among ourselves, and is due principally to the lack of unity and harmonious co-operation among our own people.

MAINTAINING PHYSICAL VIGOR

A friend who attended church in a neighboring city, was introduced at the close of the service to a man who is 102 years of age. While a lot of people can't go to church if it is hot or rainy, yet this surprising veteran found no such difficulty. He was toothless and slightly hard of hearing, yet he reads the newspapers, finds satisfaction in church services, and seems to enjoy life.

Asked what was the secret of his prolonged health, he thought it was due to his keeping up the habit of walking. He can still tramp a mile or more without getting fatigued. It is safe to say that the folks of our automobile riding age, who must be hauled around everywhere by the gasoline horse, stand little chance of reaching 102.

The proposed closing down of Henry Ford's vast automobile manufacturing and assembling plants presents the greatest single blow to industry in this country outside the railroad strike. It is announced that 105,000 men directly employed by the Ford plants will be affected besides which there are more than that many employed in the industries supplying and allied to the Ford industries. While the shortage of coal is given as the direct cause of the shutdown, Mr. Ford regards it as the outgrowth of his fight with the big moneyed interests of the East. Mr. Ford has become the biggest single factor in the financial and industrial world and he does not play the game according to the established rules laid down in Hoyle's games. He has therefore established his own playgrounds independent of the "big interests." He uses 3800 tons of coal per day and refuses to pay what he regards an unreasonable price. The coal operators have been at a loss of both profits and direct expense during the long strike and, according to their rules, this must be prorated against the expected output during the coming season and be charged against the coal now to be sold. The general public will have to pay this added cost but Mr. Ford says he will not. He has bought his own coal fields and his own railroad but declares his output has been blocked at the terminals. What the final outcome will be will be a matter of general interest and any such great loss of earnings in the present industrial situation must be a serious blow not only to Detroit but to the country at large.

Education, in this age, must fit a man for his work in life. Otherwise it is not education. The man who knows nothing of books is not educated, neither is the man who knows books only.

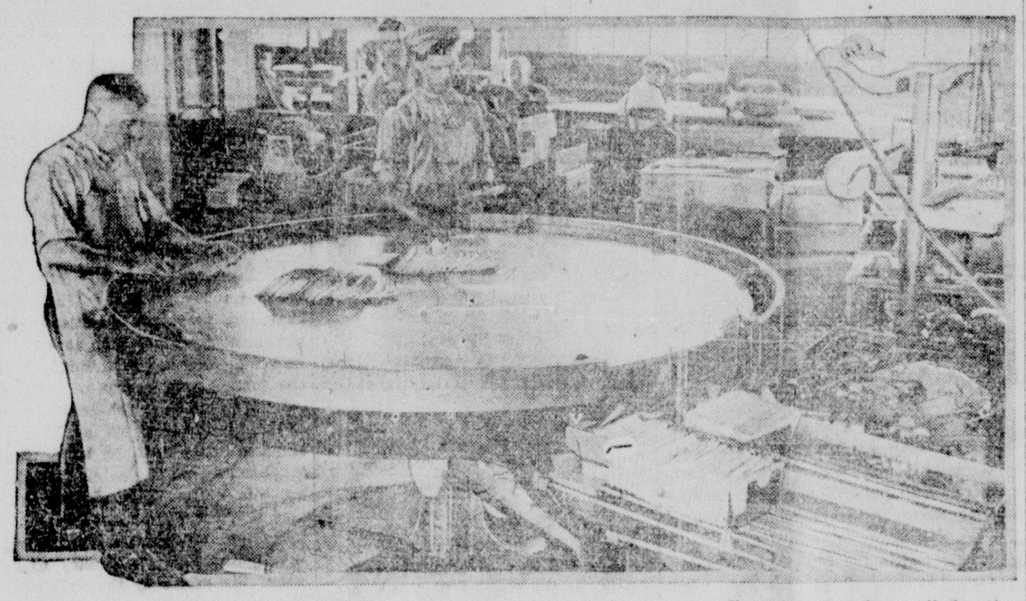
New Pick-Up Table Built for Big Post Offices



This is the new pick-up table, a labor-saving device used in the larger post offices for preparing mail for the canceling machines, designed and built by the mail equipment shops at Washington at a cost of less than $1,000 each. The lowest bid received from the outside was $3,200 each. The old tables were oblong in shape while the new one is circular and in place of the carrier belt has a revolving table which delivers the letters to the stacking mechanism. Eight clerks can work at one table.

Young Women On Long Journey Spend Night At Tourists Park

"Yes, I have driven my Studebaker 7-passenger car about 6,000 miles," said Miss Fern Opdyke of Tucson, Ariz., who with her traveling partner, Miss Florence Hutto, stopped last night at the Tourists Park, "but it is not limbered up as well as I like to have it yet. It is beginning to take the rough places in the road pretty well but not like it will when the springs are limbered up a little bit more."

The two are instructors for the Bell telephone company by profession. They conduct classes for their company in which girls are given instruction regarding rates on toll lines, they said. Miss Hutto had a severe case of typhoid fever a year ago and has never fully recovered. She thought that a time spent traveling would restore her health. Miss Opdyke says that she just likes to travel and so the two set out for a long journey.

They left Tucson early in June and went to California. After visiting for some time and seeing some of that states attractions they set out east through the mountains, traveling when they saw fit and stopping when they wanted to. Near Manhattan, Kan., Sunday they broke a spring. They had this repaired yesterday morning in Kansas City and then drove on up to Maryville. The broken spring is the only repair that they have had on the car yet.

The young women left this morning for Chicago, where they will spend a time with Miss Hutto's brother. From there they will go south to Florida, where they expect to spend the winter.

"It is simply lovely traveling as we do," said Miss Opdyke. "Our big machine rides easily and there is ample room in the back for all the bedding, cooking utensils and camp equipment that we could want. We travel in the best of comfort."

When asked if they were not afraid sometimes on the road and in the camps Miss Opdyke said "O no, we are not afraid. We have never been molested in the least. We carry fire arms in our car and would not hesitate to use them, but have never had the least occasion to do so."

The women were much pleased with the fact that they got to Maryville to pass the night for they said that the park was about the nicest that they have ever seen.

Equal Rights

Women now demand that equal rights with men be incorporated in the constitution. What does a woman have to wear during the oppressive dog days?

One low-necked sleeveless mosquito netting gown.
One pair silk stockings.
One pair slippers.
That's all.

What does a man wear during the said dog days?

One coat.
One vest.
One pair trousers.
One shirt with starched collar.
One pair shoes.
One union suit.
One hat.
One pair suspenders.
One belt.
One necktie.

If he takes his coat off in a hot restaurant he is thrown out. If he takes his tight collar off, he is a rube. If he wore his trousers slit up to the knee he would be sent to the insane asylum.

Equal rights? Huh! — Lexington Herald.

The Synthetic Lover

By WILL T. AMES

©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Little Daisy Hemphill didn't "type" circus in the least. You look for her kind behind the soda fountain of a village drug store and think of pink-and-white-checked gingham as having been inspirationally created for just her variety of prettiness. Nevertheless there was so very deep a strain of it in her blood that the night which witnessed the tragic derailment of the Hardenburg performers' train took away both her parents in one awful moment.

The All-America show was already in winter quarters. Madame Felice Hebert, who had known "the Empillo duo, premier double bareback act," ever since Daisy was a child, and who had lived more than one winter in the sunny back room of their cottage in the All-America's home town, threw up both arms and shrieked when Bob Sloan, boss of the paint shop, brought the terrible news into the wardrobe loft. Then she grabbed her hat, tore down two flights of steps, raced the entire 200 yards of trackage and exercise ground to the back gate, hailed a passing taxi and in six minutes was at Daisy's boarding house, holding the grief-shaken orphan in her arms.

The only thing about Felice Hebert that was not utterly French was her accent—which simply didn't exist. The circus is a school of thrift, and there are few dull pupils among the tanbark folk; but the thrift of Mme. Hebert was an All-American axiom. Yet, when the first dreadful days were over and Daisy came to the facing of the future, a kinless orphan, it was only her own inherent sense of justice that prevented the hard-working wardrobe woman from taking upon herself the place of both father and mother and maintaining Daisy through the final year of her high school course.

"But, look here, child," expostulated Mme. Felice, "haven't I been your mother's best friend for a dozen years, ever since she first came to our show and whether she's been with it or with some other? Haven't I watched you grow up from a little bit of a kid? Who's got a better right? Of course there's the house and a little bit on the side, but you're simply not going to eat that up—you're going to have something to start life on."

"But I'm not going to do that," argued Daisy. "I'm going to work."

And to the arrangement Mme. Felice was eventually compelled to acquiesce. But she had her way about one thing. "If you're going to earn your own living, Daisy," she said, "you're coming into my loft with me. I simply won't have you knocking around any old place."

And that's how it came that Daisy Hemphill, who didn't type circus a little bit, came to be earning her living stitching vari-colored jewels in huge designs on mammoth elephant blankets of black velvet. And Daisy's job was a very much more responsible one than it sounds.

For, be it known, to the surprise no doubt of the uninitiated, that the bushels of gems employed by the big circus in bedizening the trappings of its beasts are no ordinary fabrications of glass. If they were, a week of the wear and tear of the road would leave no single gleam in them. Instead they are truly synthetic jewels of parts, and come from overseas, and cost a pack of money in the total. Now it happens that just at the time when Daisy, under the kindly tutelage of the wardrobe chieftainess, became a seamstress to elephants, camels and Arab chargers, these highly essential gems had become very hard to get and extremely high in price. The country where they were made having with traffic folly permitted itself to become involved on the wrong side of the great war, the markets of the world were closed to it —and Enoch Prout, the All-America's purchasing agent, had made haste to gather in all the "wardrobe jewels" in sight. They cost thousands where formerly they had cost hundreds, but inasmuch as it was now assured that no other circus would be able to rival the magnificence of the All-America's trappings next season—for Enoch had cleaned out the market—it was regarded as excellent business.

Mme. Felice, as a department head, was a highly trusted and responsible executive, as well as an artist. All the store of cunningly fabricated jewels was left in her care, and was kept, along with a fortune in costly stuffs, in a great strong box in the loft. And presently Mme. Felice turned the care and accounting of this over to Daisy.

Now there were a dozen girls at work in the wardrobe loft. But for eleven of the dozen Bob Sloan, the paint-shop foreman, had no eyes at all, though the personnel of a great circus in winter quarters is a community. Bob, from the day of first catching a glimpse of Daisy, and aside from assiduous attention to his job, became a man of one idea. And the idea was Daisy.

Bob might have done well along the advancement of that idea, for he was a clean-looking young man of a somewhat rugged type, and enjoyed the respect of Mme. Felice, which was important. But it transpired that there came to the quarters just at that time a winsome youth named Joe Taggart. Joe had been candy butcher with the McGuire show, but declared he had had enough of that outfit of crooks and proposed to join up with "real people" even if he did have to take a kind of errand boy job with the quarters' superintendent to start with. He dressed well and gave the impression of being in the circus business from choice rather than necessity.

And he hadn't been in evidence a week before he had discovered Daisy and laid such seige to her that steady-going Bob Sloan was nowhere. The Bob Sloans in this world have a foolish weakness for sulkily giving way before the demonstrations in force of the Joe Taggarts. They expect too much of the girl in the case.

A girl who has lately been tragically orphaned and who sews for elephants all day in a vast bare loft needs other companionship in her leisure than that of an almost elderly French woman who counts her dimes. And Daisy loved the movies. If Bob Sloan was silly enough to sulk and quit, what was to be expected but that she should become chummy with so frank and pleasing an admirer as Joe?

But there was one thing about Joe Taggart that often sent Daisy's thoughts flying to steady old Bob. It was when, now and then, she caught Joe looking at her out of the corners of his eyes. Bob had never done that. And it made Daisy uneasy. She wished he wouldn't.

Then came the night. They had been to the movies. Joe had pretended to be going to kiss her and had pulled a handkerchief from his overcoat pocket to wipe his lips in mock preparation—all play, for Daisy never let Joe kiss her, you know. But when he had gone Daisy found, on the floor of the hallway, a letter without an envelope. Words in it caught her eye and she read it—flagrantly; anybody would have done so; anybody, at all events, who was eighteen and had been made love to by the person who dropped the letter. This is what she read:

Joe—For the love of Mike how much longer is it going to take you to pull that trick? You say the girl's a simp? Well, get busy with her and cop the goods. Mac's frothing at the mouth because his tinsel room is held up waiting for them sparks. You'll be losing the thousand and your pickings with this show if you don't get a wiggle on you. Get going.

BLANEY.

"I brought it to you, Bob," said Daisy to Sloan the first thing next morning, "because I thought somebody ought to know, and you seemed—oh, I don't know, you seemed to be the only one."

"I'm glad you did," said Bob soberly. "Felice would have made an awful noise. And we must keep this quiet for your sake. I'm sorry, little girl. You liked him a lot, didn't you? It's too bad to have him turn out to be here just to steal a lot of wardrobe jewels for McGuire. I'll take this to the boss, and I'm sure he'll just shoo him away quietly."

Daisy looked up into the kind, deeply concerned eyes of the man for a long moment. "Bob," she asked irrelevantly, "you're eleven years older than I am, aren't you? If you were eleven hundred, do you suppose you'd know anything?" Then she turned and walked back to the wardrobe stairs, and Bob, wondering, couldn't see the smile at all.

AMERICA NATION OF READERS

This Country Easily Leads the World in Production of Newspapers, Magazines and Books.

It requires no figures to prove—though there are plenty of them and confusing enough—that Americans read more newspapers, magazines and books than any people in the world. We have all heard of the amazed question asked of the popular author who boasted of turning out two novels a year, "But when do you think?" When do Americans think, or work or sleep, or play? How do they find time to do anything except read?

There is an American publication—and usually many more than one—devoted to every interest, every state and every hobby by which men and women are distinguished. As soon as any considerable number of persons discover they think alike on any subject they start a publication to propagate their views. They form associations, too, and these associations elect secretaries and the secretaries form associations and these associations publish a magazine devoted to the business of secretaries.

Every trade, of course, and every profession has its official publication. Every sport has one or more. Nor do they enjoy anything like monopoly of their particular fields, for every publication of a general character has its own department devoted to these same subjects. And when they have all had their say the newspaper comes along and covers the fields of all. There is no corner of any pasture capable of producing the slightest growth that has been left unturned.—Kansas City Star.

The Mood of the Time.

"I have no doubt that you could write a very interesting book of reminiscences," remarked the admiring friend.

"I might," replied Senator Sorghum. "But I am not going to attempt any such thing. At present people are not so much interested in what has happened as in what is going to happen."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Small Beginning.

"What led you to become a political boss?"

"Chance," replied Senator Sorghum. "They wanted a man to run for a small office, and picked me as the only man who was so unprosperous that particular moment that the salary would be an inducement."

CONTRADICTS THE LADY

Here is ex-Prince Oleg Rodimir, grandson of the late King Nikolas of Montenegro, once an officer of the czar's army, now an American citizen and business man, "on the job" at his desk in the Standard Oil company's office in Constantinople. This photograph has just been received in New York by a friend of Mr. Rodimir, and it accompanied a letter in which he vigorously denied the engagement which Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein has "admitted." At the age of fourteen Oleg ran away from a military school enlisted as a Russian private, was wounded 32 times, and attained the rank of colonel. Captured by the Bolsheviki in Siberia, he escaped, stowed away on a freighter, and next turned up as a hardware clerk in Clarksburg Va. Then to New York, where he obtained an engagement for a fifteen weeks' concert tour (he is a tenor).

Mr. McLean said he had filed his petition with the secretary of state, and had obtained seven hundred signatures of his friends in Sullivan county and other sections of the state.

Mr. McLean outlined the following platform upon which he is running as an independent candidate:

"We have too many lawyers holding office, especially in congress. Eliminate the lawyers and fill their places with farmers, artisans and mechanics.

"I favor prohibition of grain gambling; clean elections; changing the primary laws so that an honest choice of the parties can be made, and prevention of foreign syndicates holding American land.

"As a remedial measure against strikes, the government should hold employer and employee collectively responsible for all injury to the public. We should have lower transportation rates, by government control.

"I am 'dry.'"

The weight and volume of all the different kinds studied about in the arithmetic is contained in the cabinet. As the child studies them he has before him the real thing that he is studying about.

Then there is a great change in the demand for the lunch bucket. They are now equipped witha thermos bottle from which the child may have a warm drink at noon. The thermos bottles are tucked away in the top of the kit.

Mother used to make a book satchel from some kind of goods that she had in the house or from oil cloth. Now the satchels are on the market. They are watertight and have compartments for the various books and materials.

It is almost a revelation for the man of today to visit a school supply store and look over the things that are now on the market for the school children and at the same time allow his mind to wander back to the days when he went to the rural school and to think over the things that he had.

Know That You Get Genuine Dry Cleaning

A blacksmith may advertise "Watches Cleaned," but you'll still take your timepiece to a jeweler. You know that the jeweler is competent to clean your watch properly, he specializes on this work.

But when your clothes need Dry Cleaning, are you sure they go to a specialist, one who knows the Dry Cleaning business and has the equipment essential to quality work?

Genuine Dry Cleaning requires expert workmen who are masters of their trade. Every step of the cleaning process requires exacting care based on "years of knowing how." The result is that every particle of dirt is removed from the garments, leaving them fresh, bright and clean.

WHAT KIND OF PHYSICAL CONDITION ARE YOU IN?

Series of Posters to be Taken to the Schools by Dr. Fryer Ask Some Questions

"Are you fit?

Can you walk 20 miles in a day?

Can you work an eight hour day in the field?

Can you chin yourself eight times?

Can you run 100 yards in twelve seconds?"

These are some of the questions which are asked and which are illustrated by a series of forty-eight posters which have been received by Dr. Claude P. Fryer, county health officer, from the United States Public Health Service in connection with the American Social Hygiene Association. They will be used by the Nodaway County Health Department in connection with a bulletin, "Keeping Fit," to illustrate in the county schools the benefits derived from a good health program.

It is Dr. Fryer's plan to take these posters to the schools and exhibit them. In connection with the exhibit he will prepare a lecture which he will deliver with each poster. The posters each have a picture which illustrates some point in health development which is presented in an attractive way. To the boys who are interested in athletics there are pictures representing the various games and some point of interest in the game.

Accompanying these is some illustration of how sex impulse affects achievements in athletics, the affect of out door life, sleeping in the open air, wholesome food and bathing often. The posters suggest the exercise of the body by doing useful work, keeping the mind occupied by the use of good books and to use the mind constructively.

The series closes with the pictures of Roosevelt and Lincoln. Under Roosevelt's picture is an explanation which says "sickly and frail when a boy, Roosevelt by faithful training achieved the vigor of manhood," and under Lincoln's picture it reads "Abraham Lincoln was prepared for the great service rendered because he kept himself fit in body and mind."

DAWSON EXPENSES IN PRIMARY WERE $42.50

The referendum on the judicial circuits, changing this district from Nodaway, Gentry, Worth and Atchison, to Nodaway, Andrew, Holt and Atchison Counties, will be voted on at at November election. If the change in this district should carry, then an appointment will be made by Governor Hyde until the next election.

BIG OIL WELL BURNING

This giant oil well at Eldorado, Ark., has been burning almost constantly since May 18. The friction of the sand and gas thrown out of the well in enormous quantities caused it to catch fire. The blaze, which at times is more than 1,000 feet high, can be seen for a distance of fifteen miles. The crater is 350 feet across.

Gasoline Consumption Jumping

GASOLINE consumption during the month of June, 1922, was 20% greater than during the month of May, 1922, and considerably higher than June, 1921.

On June 1, 1922, there were in storage 856,607,102 gallons of gasoline, or 82 gallons for each of the 10,448,632 automobiles registered Jan. 1, 1922.

This means less gasoline per car in storage than for any similar period since 1918, with the single exception of the year 1920 when there were only 76.4 gallons per car.

The summer demand for gasoline is about double the lowest demand of the winter. If July and August consumption shows an increase proportionate to the June demand (as appears probable) stocks may be expected to decline rapidly.

However, because of its unrivaled facilities, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is equipped to care for the gasoline needs of its patrons throughout the Middle Western States it serves.

The refineries of this Company operate the year through in order that products will be ready when the heavy summer demand comes. At all times the Company attempts to have its field storage tanks full.

To maintain an abundant supply of gasoline at all points in the territory requires the unceasing efforts of 26,000 employees, the manufacturing capacity of 6 large refineries, the field storage at 3821 bulk stations, 1700 service stations, 515,000 iron barrels, and over 6600 tank wagon and delivery trucks.

The motorist who will think in terms of the unceasing streams of cars on the streets about him will quickly appreciate the magnitude of the task confronting the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). This task is far more difficult of performance in the Middle West than elsewhere in the United States because the number of cars per capita is greater and the mileage of these cars is greater.

Great as this undertaking is, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has proved equal to the job. As gasoline consumption increases, this Company provides facilities to meet it. It believes that this expansion of activity is an essential part of the service which it is expected to perform.

The Master of the Road
Buick Seven Passenger Touring—$1435

Sweeping refinements in motor, chassis, body and equipment mark the Buick seven-passenger open car for 1923.

Re-designing has brought the car's height down several inches with no sacrifice of head-room; an entirely new cantilever spring suspension provides a degree of riding comfort unexcelled. Above the windshield is a visor of distinctive design, there is a cowl ventilator, a gasoline gauge on the dash, a rear-view mirror, a transmission lock, the shifting lever has been extended. The entire car shows a completeness of equipment not to be found elsewhere within a thousand dollars of its price.

And back of these improvements stand the traditional qualities of Buick Valve-in-Head power and stability.

The seven-passenger touring is one of fourteen entirely new models at entirely new prices which Buick offers for 1923.
